An Acquaintance Subscription Offer

HOW often it happens that you saunter over to a newsstand, while waiting for your train, and, glancing at the table of contents of a magazine, see two or three articles on subjects in which you are interested. You purchase a copy of that magazine and enjoy the articles which came to your attention in this haphazard way. But no one can obtain an intimate acquaintance with a magazine through the purchase of a single copy from a newsstand.

Many of today's subscribers to THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW, who were occasional newsstand purchasers, came to know THE REVIEW intimately through an acquaintance subscription. Today they are THE REVIEW's staunchest friends and warmest admirers.

THE REVIEW again gives you the opportunity which others have enjoyed by offering you a four months' subscription for $1.00.

The noteworthy feature of THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW is timeliness — subject and author depend upon the need of the moment.

YOU should not miss this opportunity to become acquainted with a magazine which you will find always interesting, entertaining and helpful in the formation of an intelligent opinion.

THE manner in which THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW is today serving world-wide interests with authoritative presentations of the most vital and timely topics in international as well as national affairs, in politics, sociology and ecomics, in literature, art and ethics, is well illustrated in the following list of articles scheduled to appear in the near future:

THE PROBLEM OF THE PACIFIST — Major Sherman Miles, U.S.A.
CHATEAUBRIAND AND THE MONROE DOCTRINE — W. P. Cresson
THE HEART OF THE WESSEX NOVELS — Augustus Ralli
GOVERNMENT BY GROUP PRESSURE — Ernest R. Groves

The North American Review

Announces for early publication the following articles of exceptional and timely interest:

The Ordinance-Making Power of the President — JAMES HART

A timely discussion and exposition of the discretionary power vested in the President of the United States for making or modifying laws.

Experience — STEPHEN GWYNN

A consideration of the value of adventure and of "the school in which fools learn wisdom," full of intimate appeal to human nature.

Adelaide Crapsey — LLEWELLYN JONES

A sympathetic and authoritative study of the brilliant English poet, prosodist and critic, whose works have been too little known to the world.

The Five Dimensions — DUDLEY H. WIGGINS

With an introduction by BOOTH TARKINGTON

A deliciously whimsical but equally wise discourse on man's experience with Length, Breadth, Thickness, Time and Space, with an appreciative introduction by the eminent novelist.

Political Democracy in Hispanic America — MARY W. WILLIAMS

An illuminating account of political conditions and tendencies in our republican neighbors at the south, by an expert observer.

Of Standards — HENRY RUTGERS MARSHALL

An authoritative essay on the dominant principles which prevail, or should prevail, in our philosophy of ethics, morals and æsthetics—the True, the Good, the Beautiful.

Chateaubriand and the Monroe Doctrine — W. P. CRESSON

A hitherto unrealized but intensely interesting chapter of personal and political history concerning the close relationship of the famous French poet, philosopher and statesman to the American principle of foreign policy, the centenary of which is celebrated this year.

Internationally Controlled Migration — EDWIN GODMAN

An important contribution toward the solution of one of the foremost political and economic problems of the day.

The Resurrection and Immortality — PHILIP S. MOXOM

A clergyman-author's thoughtful consideration of humanity's supreme hope and aspiration.

The Wooden Indian and the Iron Deer — ALLEN TUCKER

An entertaining but solidly instructive discussion of recent tendencies and present needs in American art.

View of Teignmouth in Devonshire — AMY LOWELL

A long poem in Miss Lowell's most effective manner, portraying John Keats and his environment.

The Multitude: An Appreciation of Alice Meynell — JEANNETTE MARKS

An accomplished American critic's estimate of the works and spirit of the great English poet whose recent death the world deplores.

"Great Favorites"
of the Atlantic

Your trip to Europe.

From the time of wooden ships, through the age of iron to the present one of steel, Cunard Liners have been aptly called the "Favorites" of the Atlantic. The history of Cunard construction, equipment and service, in each epoch throughout four generations, typifies the highest development in the speed, comfort and luxury of transatlantic travel. The present Cunard and Anchor Fleet of magnificent, modern ships (most of them oil-burners) exceeds a million tons.

The Fastest Passenger Service in the World

PILGRIM'S REST — The New Novel by BRETT YOUNG

The scenes reflect convincingly life along that brilliant, feverish, fascinating fifty-mile long street, the Rand, as those who know the author's gift for atmosphere will readily believe. Equally clear-cut and credible is the hero, struggling against a subtle temptation to profit by a dead man's loss, and winning by sheer force of character. $2.00

BRETT YOUNG is author also of "The Crescent Moon," "Marching on Tanga," "The Young Physician," "The Tragic Bride," "The Black Diamond," "The Red Knight," and with his brother, "Undergrowth."

By LEE WILSON DODD

Author of "The Book of Susan," and "Lilia Chenoworth."

The Girl Next Door

Pungent, whimsical, delightful even if the author does call it "the crabbed chronicle of a misanthrope." $2.00

By CLAUDE FARRERE

The House of the Secret

A weird and potent story of a mysterious adventure, translated from the French. First American edition, limited. $3.50

By MANUEL GALVEZ

Nacha Regules

One of the foremost Argentinian writers of the modern realistic school makes this pity-inspired indictment of the society which for generations has forced such as Nacha Regules to exist. $3.00

By ARMEN OHANIAN

The Dancer of Shamahka

The writer's own life, told in detail, is an unusual revelation of the Orient, and what is more unusual still one from the Oriental's point of view. $2.00

By JAMES L. FORD

Hot Corn Ike

The inside story of lower ward politics told by the author of those racy reminiscences in "Forty-odd Years in the Literary Shop." $2.00

By GERARD HOPKINS

An Unknown Quantity

An uncommonly well-written meaty novel. A discerning, significant story of a young author's problems. $2.00

By JOHN MIDDLETON MURRY

Countries of the Mind

Essays by England's leading literary critic, "perfectly equipped, perfectly organized and utterly fearless." $4.00

By PAUL BOUSFIELD

The Omnipotent Self

By the author of "The Elements of Practical Psycho-Analysis." A clear account of the Narcissus complex with practical applications useful to teachers and parents. $2.00

By THOMAS H. DICKINSON

The United States and the League

Just the convenient statement you will need of the various proposals, etc., concerning the most insistent problem before the country to-day. $2.00

By BENJAMIN HARROW

What To Eat In Health and Sickness

A non-technical yet strictly scientific statement of our knowledge about foods by the author of "Vitamines," "Glands," etc. $2.00

By EDWARD CRESSY

Discoveries and Inventions of the Twentieth Century

A second large edition, revised, enlarged, profusely illustrated, and brought up to date. $5.00

By MAJOR VICTOR LEFEBURE

The Riddle of the Rhine

An account of the importance of chemistry in the past and even more in any future war; and of the menace involved in allowing Germany to regain her old dominance of chemical industries. $2.00
